POWER SPELLS: ABRACADABRA

An Abracadabra spell is a way to wrap up a whole bunch of magical spells in one quick phrase. When you say the phrase, it's like saying the longer spell. In computer programming you'd call abracadabra a variable that's assigned a block of text. When you say Abracadabra, the magical universe executes the longer spell.

The pace and tone of voice in which you say ABRACADABRA effects how the longer phrase is delivered and works magically. So if you take a long time to say it, the longer phrase takes longer in time. If you say it more quickly, it's like saying the entire phrase more quickly.

Also if you roll the R's when saying Abracadabra, it's like the phrase is getting looped. So that part of the spell happens multiple times. Rolling the delivery of the ABRACADABRA is like when a DJ replays a sample of a record over and over and then lets the record play.

Here's an example of my latest Abracadabra:

THIS IS MY ABRACADABRA.

It is true in each and every dimension and in each and every universe.

That's the end of the spell. The last part is useful to seal the spell. In the first draft I left out the every dimension and every universe part, that allows your ADBRADABRA to be bypassed in other universes and other dimensions. So now I fixed that problem. br->
The first phrase announces the name of the spell, repeating it at the end seals the spell and makes anything inbetween those two statements your ABRACADABRA. Everyone can set their own. Once it is set you have to reset it to change it. You can also say it in your head and it works but not as effectively.

Sorcerers have been using ABRACADABRA for thousands of years. The ancient Persians invented it. The illuminati likes to claim it's hebrew but it's not. HERE'S AN ARTICLE PROVING THE PHRASE IS NOT HEBREW OR ARAMAIC.
